Professional Experience

Brooklyn Historical Society

Director of Oral History, 2010 – present
Oral History Program Coordinator, 2006 – 2010

Since joining BHS in 2006, Sady Sullivan has led eight oral history projects and conducted life history interviews with over 200 people. In addition, she manages the digitization of BHS's legacy oral histories, 12 projects dating back to 1973, encompassing over 200 interviews. BHS makes its oral history collections available for listening through a searchable database in the Othmer Library and is investigating strategies to provide access online. Sady also produces audio for exhibition and podcasts, bringing voices of history into current cultural conversations. She organizes public programs and presents frequently on the subject of oral history, particularly issues surrounding accessibility, to history students, teachers, and archivists at schools and conferences.
